In the actual event, Topalov drew all his games in the second half which was enough for him to win the tournament and become World Chess Champion. Anand moved up one place to finish as runner-up, Svidler took the bronze. They were followed by Morozevich in 4th, Lékó 5th and Kasimdzhanov 6th, while the bottom two did not change their places.

In 2006, Topalov lost his title to Vladimir Kramnik in what's since been infamously called the match of the „toilet scandal”.
